

Lower Wych is a small village, situated partly in Flintshire, and partly in Cheshire, about two miles from either church or chapel. Consequently, a suitable place of worship was greatly wanted here.

A short time previous to building the chapel, a powerful revival of pure religion broke out, the congregation and the society so increased, that they could not be accommodated in the preaching room. A plot of land was bought, and the foundation sermons were preached at the Camp meeting, July 5, 1840, which were numerous and respectably attended; and sinners were converted.

This chapel is eight yards by five, inside, and about eleven feet from the floor to the wall plate. Two windows at each end, one at each side of the door, and one on each side of the pulpit. The windows are six feet by three inside, with circular tops. It is built with bricks; and the inscription stone, above the door, has—"Primitive Methodist Chapel, 1840." It has a neat pulpit, twenty-two benches, and one of Dr. Arnott's stoves, which cost two pounds two shillings.

Oct. 11 and 12, 1840, this neat, well-built, and comfortable chapel was opened for divine service. Four sermons were preached; on the Sunday, three by T. Adams, from Lichfield, and the other by J. Sadler; and T. Adams preached on the Monday night following. The congregations were large, respectable, and attentive. The expenditure is eighty pounds. Donations, subscriptions, and collections are thirty-five pounds. The debt on this chapel is forty-five pounds.

This society, after much prayer, care, anxiety, and diligence, have accomplished their object in building a house of prayer; and only having this small debt, they hope soon to have it clear.

On Good Friday they held a large tea meeting. The persons who took tea were so numerous, they were obliged to have a large tent in a field. All was well conducted; a good effect was produced; and upwards of six pounds was cleared towards liquidating the debt on the chapel. So this will reduce the debt to about thirty-nine pounds. The congregation and the society are prosperous, and the work of the Lord is going on. To his name be all the glory.
